

Richard Jones

White Towels

I have been studying the difference between solitude and loneliness, telling the story of my life to the clean white towels taken clean from the dryer.
I carry them through the house as though they were my children asleep in my arms.

The Blessing: New and Selected Poems
Port Townsend, Copper Canyon Press, 2000:86